This degree is a Bachelor of Music, with a rigorous audition standard common to all of Florida Atlantic University music degrees.

Florida Atlantic University is accredited by the National Association of Schools of Music, which upholds stringent access requirements, such as placement auditions. Granting limited access status to Florida Atlantic University's Department of Music programs would further document that we are meeting NASM accreditation standards.

6. By what means will access be limited? Please provide a description of the program's admissions requirements and procedures, and indicate how these requirements and procedures ensure equal access for Florida community college Associate of Arts degree graduates in the competition for available space in the program.

The degree is offered as a four-year major, with music requirements implemented from the very first semester of study. Students are evaluated as to their potential to meet professional performance expectations in the field commercial music industry placement. Students who meet those placement audition standards have proven to be successful in meeting exit requirements such as the final projects in commercial music, successful internship placement, and have enjoyed successful job placement upon graduation.

Transfer students also audition for entry into the program, but are held to a higher performance standard than entering freshmen. The student must exhibit the ability to timely execute the exit requirements of the final project and the ability to function at a professional level in the performance ensembles in order to be eligible for acceptance into the music major.

7. Present the current race and gender profiles of the students in the program. Discuss the impact of the proposed action on the race and gender profiles. Cite sources used for discussion. What strategies, should they be necessary, will be used to promote diversity in the program?

The admissions process into Florida Atlantic University's music program is similar to those in place at limited access music programs in the State University System. FAU is currently the only institution in the SUS with the Music Business degree. It is expected that granting limited access to this program at Florida Atlantic University will have no negative impact on gender or race enrollment figures, as our enrollment in the program increases each year. Florida Atlantic University's student body currently enjoys recognition as one of the most diverse in the state, and granting limited access to this program would not change the diversity in our department.

8. Are the graduates of the program in high demand? If so, and if the program is to be limited due to lack of adequate resources, provide a justification for limiting access to the program rather than reallocating resources from programs with low market demand.

The graduates from the music program are successful in finding job placement upon graduation. The limited access is primarily achieved by evaluating students prior to entry and identifying whether they are at a pre-professional performance level that would allow them to compete upon graduation in the commercial music industry. Students who perform below our threshold do not show adequate market potential and are encouraged to apply to other degree programs outside of music. At this time, limited resources is not the reason for limited access request; rather, it is to allow the continuation of evaluating students as to their ability to reach market standards in the timeframe of either four or two years.
